

David Bromley

Artist David Bromley can currently be found working on a mural in Urunga town centre, which was commissioned after the Bellingen Shire Council secured a grant from the NSW Department of Trade and Industry.

David has called the Coffs Coast home since returning from London, where he worked as a cartoonist and illustrator for many top newspapers. Before that he worked for many years at the Sydney Morning Herald, and has won many awards and much recognition for his art. These days he does a lot of linocut, wood engraving and printing from his local studio.

I won a nationwide award in grammar school in the UK when I was twelve, and I was encouraged by the art teacher there. In Australia, after leaving school, I started off in architecture, but was getting cartoons published in student newspapers and then the Fairfax press. David was offered a full-time job with Fairfax at the age of 23 and won a Walkley Award at the age of 24.

<http://coffscoast.focusmag.com.au/david-bromley/>

